Question:	What other comments do you have about the strengths and weaknesses of this course?
Response Rate:	71.43% (5 of 7)

1	none
2	This course was strange, it included mountains of reading required that could only be accessed online. The Teacher was nice enough, but that did not make up for painful nature of having to spend hours pouring through blurry copies of online transcripts.
3	Strengths were that it was minimum commitment, but weaknesses were that it was not engaging.
4	Information units are still applicable but have dated examples (2008)
5	Course work was the appropriate amount, didn't feel too overwhelmed.

| Question:	What other comments do you have about the strengths and weaknesses of this course?
Response Rate:	75.00% (6 of 8)

1	no communications at all. Left hanging with no guidance. As my first year in grade school, this is horrible.
2	Professor Del Ama Gonzalo was very responsive whenever I had questions about case studies or in the readings for discussion posts. The content he presented was easy to learn and accessible. I enjoy online classes and while others may opt for in-person classes I thought this course was well taught and nicely laid out week by week. I did not use the office house the professor provided (hence why I voted neutral).
3	Interesting topics, well organized, informative.
4	I wish we could have met our professor in some way, either through a recorded video of him teaching. I know we can request a video chat, but it helps connect sometimes to the course materials to see and hear the person speak. Other than that, I learned a lot about the history of communication in this class.
5	I really liked the layout. Having no textbooks, but rather a very informative website with everything needed for the course was very useful and organized. I appreciated not having to dig through folders on Blackboard. Even though I personally had some difficulties with the material, I still think the Blackboard discussions were very helpful in applying what we learned in the units. The guidelines for the assignments and exams were also very clear. I am also personally not a history person, but the information and backstories provided were really useful in understanding the origins of strategic communications and was perfect for an intro course. Note: I put neutral for several of the questions below because this was an asynchronous class and there was no class time or opportunities to ask questions in class. The instructor was very responsive and active on Blackboard though, which I appreciate very much.
6	Got a little bit too political in the online discussions at some points.

1	n/a
2	This was the perfect introduction course to the Graduate Program. The materials given made the theories come to life and brought it from a hypothetical to real-life examples.
3	This class was great because it gave me more than enough time to do the readings and work. However, I do think some face to face communication would've been helpful, especially since we did a lot of reading. Talking about the content more would've been helpful, so I think this class would be better suited to be a hybrid.
4	The course strength of this class is the expert experience and knowledge of our instructor, Professor Jose Carlos Del Ama Gonzalo. His insight into Strategic Communication, research methods, and engagement has made this class a joy to experience. The only area of opportunity is that I wish this course could have been taken in person.
5	I recommend that the Discussion Board component of this course be listed in Blackboard's course grading screen. Many students use this page as their go-to for what assignments are due, more so than the general left tab on BB's course information. It would make things easier to manage.
6	I had a hard time at the beginning with the announcements. I wish there was a way I could receive the professor's announcement on my phone.
7	Good class
